Beyond the general accusations, the statement did not make any revelations that would damage the Christian Democratic party, of which Mr. Moro is president, to the government or even to the Commu-nist party, which is now supporting the government largely as a result of Mr. Moro's efforts.

Mr. Moro played a key role in bringing about the compromise be-tween Communists and Christian Democrats that made it possible for Premier Giulio Andreotti to form a government with Commu-nist support last month after a long

Dr. Westoff, director of the Office of Population Research at Princeton University, presented the results on fertility rates among married white women to the annual meeting of the Population Associa-tion of America. Catholic Rate

Also by 1975, 90 per cent of the nation's Catholic women who were married less than five years were using contraception methods not approved by the church. In 1955, 80 per cent conformed to prohibition of any contraceptive method-other than the rhythm method. The Catholic women who married from 1951 to 1955 had an average of four children each, giving them the highest fertility rate of any group in the years studied.

"The rejection of the church's prohibition of the use of artificial birth control has been shared by practicing as well as nominal Catholics," Dr. Westoff said. Accordingly, he added, the decline in fertility among Catholic women to the rates of non-Catholics has occurred regardless of adherence to other church norms.

Dr. Westoff also said that the advent of oral contraceptives un-doubtedly facilitated the sharp decline in Catholic fertility that began "in earnest" around 1963 to 1964. For several years, there was a belief that the church would accept the pill as a method of regulating ovulation, and by 1968, when a papal European tourists had been on an encyclical reaffirmed the church's espionage mission.

JERUSALEM, April 16 (WP)-The government of Prime Minister Menachem Begin has adopted a new policy toward the West Bank, indicating clearly that it recognizes a UN Security Council resolution calling for Israeli withdrawal from territories captured from Jordan in the 1967 war, senior Foreign Ministry officials confirmed yesterday.

They said that new instructions would be sent this weekend to Is-raeli diplomatic missions to explain the new policy on UN Resolution 242. The resolution calls for, among other things, Israeli withdrawal from all occupied territo-

The new government position was first advanced by Foreign Min-ister Moshe Dayan in a television interview Friday night. "Obviously the resolution asks us to withdraw from territories we captured from all the neighbors, including Jordan," Mr. Dayan said.

The Salisbury group already has rejected the idea of such a meeting, elaiming that it had nothing to say to "terrorists." Mr. Vance and Mr.

U.S. Rushed Approval of Uranium Exports

By Thomas O'Toole and Jim Hoagland

WASHINGTON, April 16 (WP)—The U.S. government quiet-iy approved the export of 1,000 pounds of enriched uranium to three European nations only 24 hours before a congressionally imposed ban on nuclear fuel exports to Common Market countries went

In an apparent effort to avoid an immediate new confrontation with Western Europe over nuclear poli-cies, the Nuclear Regulatory Com-mission sped through 10 export Ecenses for shipments to France, West Germany and Denmark on April 7, a day before the recently enacted Nuclear Non-Proliferation Act of 1978 required that such shipments be halted.

The Common Market countries are pushing shead with a plutoni-um-based breeder reactor nuclear energy program of the sort that the Carter administration has sought to delay in the United States. The Europeans depend on the United States for more than 70 per eent of their enriched uranium shipments. These shipments are not available elsewhere, and a cutoff would be a major blow to European energy development.

Many of the licenses had been pending for a year. Administration spokesmen asserted that President Carter personally approved nine of them months before the recent finr-ry of activity, although the spokes-men could not immediately provide the dates of the presidential appro-

The right-ist Phalangist party radio said that Mr. Sarkis will ask Mr. Waldheim to turn the UN force in Lebanon from a simple peace force into a strong deterrent instrument.

Christian sources added that Lebanon wants the UN force en-larged from its original target strength of 4,000 men to 8,000, with French participation. Of the target size of 4,000 men, only about 2,000 are in southern Lebanon.

In Washington, Zhigniew Brzez-inski, President Carter's national security adviser, said that Israel has confirmed that its forces used U.S.-supplied cluster bombs in southern Lebanon in contradiction to "previous assurances given to us."

Tighter Controls

In a letter to Rep. Paul McClos-key, R-Calif., Mr. Brzezinski said that the State Department has expressed U.S. concern over use of the weapons. WASHINGTON, April 16 (WP)—Charles Evans, a lawyer with the Securities and Exchange Commission, was arrested for speeding in Arlington Cemetery. He allegedly was going 30 miles an hour in a 20 mile-an-hour zone. On his bicycle.

The $10 violation notice that Mr. Evans got, after a cemetery police car stopped him with flashing red lights, may be the first speeding ticket given a bicyclist in the Washington area, according to local police and traffic officials.

"I have no speedometer on my bike and have no idea how fast I was going, although it was downhill," said Mr. Evans, who commutes by bicycle about 18 miles a day to the SEC offices. He is one of more than 50 bicyclists who commute daily through the cemetery, a route that avoids heavy commuter traffic.

Under Virginia law, which applies in the cemetery, speeding and other traffic regulations that apply to motorists also apply to those riding bicycles or animals.

Mr. Evans said he was surprised to get the ticket. "I thought a warning might have been appropriate if I were speeding, which I don't admit I was."

"He probably should have been given some kind of physical fitness award instead of a ticket," a National Park Service official said after hearing of the speeding ticket.

Novel Reportedly Details ENOUGH! NOW & Coup Attempt of Author

Guinea, the Sunday Times reported todav.

The respected British newspaper said that Mr. Forsyth's novel, "The Dogs of War," about mercenaries in Africa, was a thinly disguised account of the operation in 1972-73.

But it said that while the mercenaries in the control of the presented in the control of the control of naries in the book succeeded in their objective, "in real life, Forsyth's mercenaries were arrest-ed by Spanish police 3,000 miles from their target and ignominiously packed off home."

The newspaper said that it pieced the story together from mercenaries scattered in Europe and southern Africa. But it said that the reporters who interviewed Mr. Forsyth "found him oddly coy about his source of inspiration.

The Sunday Times said that Mr. Forsyth "began to plot his coup d'etat" against President Macias Nguema Biyogo of Equatorial Guinea in 1970 shortly after returning from Biafra.

Mr. Forsyth was a BBC reporter during the Nigerian civil war, in which Biafra unsuccessfully tried to break away as a separate state.
It said that Mr. Forsyth's objective was to provide a new homeland for the defeated Biafrans. It said that his confident and adviser was a Scottish mercenary named Alexander Gay.

The aim was to capture Macias Nguema island, otherwise known as Fernando Poo, from where Mr. Macias rules.

Equatorial Guinea consists of Macies Nguema island, about 20 miles from the African mainland. Pagalu island, the three Corisco is-lands and Rio Muni, a mainland area between Cameroon and Gabon, It has a total area of about 11,000 square miles and a popula-tion of 286,000. But the Patriotic Front, according to U.S. officials, made what Mr. Vance called "fundamental" proposals to change the British-U.S. plan in at least two key areas, those dealing with the police in the transition period, and those dealing with the makeup of the governing council that would help administer the country along with a British commissioner.

The original British-U.S. plan called for the Rhodesian police of 8,000, plus a large auxiliary of 35,000 currently run by whites, to remain in force but to be directed by an outside impartial official.

The Patriotic Front reportedly insisted, during the two days of talks in the Kilimanjaro Hotel here, that they be allowed to have a direct role in running the police and that members of its guerrilla forces, now operating mostly outside Rho-desia, be added to the police force.

Moreover, the Patriotic Front wanted in ensure that it had parity on the governing council with the Salisbury group. The original plan apportioned representation in such a way that each nationalist leader

If a side agreement limited the total number of Backfires that the Soviet Union could produce and half of that number remained committed to the anti-ship mission, defense officials involved with the SALT negotiations contend that the threat to the United States from Backfire would be diminished.

U.S. critics of President Carter's SALT proposals have argued that the Backfire could drop nuclear bombs on the United States and thus should be counted as a strategic weapon in a new arms control

White House Fault

He pointed out that the failure of the Cabinet to implement White House policies was as much the fault of the White House as of the Cabinet members. "We have not done what the White House is supposed to do in terms of making decisions. We have not provided the general direction that the government needs, and the White House is supposed to provide."

A recent example of chaotic poli-cy-making was the administration's urban policy plan. Continuing de-lays in the formulation of the policy gave the President only 12 hours to study a 178-page "decision" memorandum which called on him to make 75 decisions. The day of the announcement, Mr. Carter told his top aides that he had serious reservations about some of the proposals, which he ultimately

Several White House aides have privately expressed anger with Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal on at least two occasions. The first was when he said that the White House was not committed to full-scale tax reform at a time when the White House was formulating what it considered to be full-scale tax reform.

The second time was when Mr. Blumenthal gave White House aides only 24 hours to study his "The Joint Chiefs of Staff have recommended counting the Soviet Backfire in the aggregate since it bas characteristics and campbilities."

Nixon Lessons

The President, sensitive to the lessons of the Nixon years, was re-huctant to restrain his Cabinet officers. He began without a White House chief of staff, and sought no H.R. Haldeman to discipline the White House aides and Cabinet officers and funnel decisions to him. White House managerial problems forced him, however, to delegate increasing authority to Hamilton Jor-dan, his chief political adviser who has become his de-facto chief of Unlike most of his predecessors, the President rarely displays anger with subordinates and is known for his reluctance to dismiss or even reprimand anyone with whom he is dissatisfied. Some White House aides believed that Mr. Carter thereby has failed to use an important management tool and created an atmosphere in which everyone seems to be in business for himself.

"He keeps his cool," said Stnart Eizenstat, the President's domestic defense. But several independent policy adviser. "He doesn't express outrage. But if you've been around for a while, you know he's displeased. He's a probing questioner, and you'd be dense not to know what be was driving at."

Carter Offers Oil Firms Billions in Concessions

By J.P. Smith

WASHINGTON. April 16 price categories, and less would be WP)—The Carter administration, held at lower price levels. (WP)—The Carter administration, trying to salvage the President's proposed excise tax on crude oil, has offered domestic oil producers billions of dollars in special concessions between now and 1986 in return for their support of the tax.

Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger told independent producers that, if the industry were successful in pushing through the tax legislation, the White House would take a series of administrative steps that would guarantee the companies added revenues.

At the same time, according to sources, Mr. Schlesinger warned that if the producers and Congress do not accept the crude-oil tax the White House would restricts its administrative aid so the industry would net no more than $6 billion between now and 1986.

The proposals were outlined by Mr. Schlesinger in separate meetings with independent oil producers on April 4 and April 10. Also attending were Representatives Al Uliman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Commit-tee, and Thoms Ashley. D-Ohio. House energy coordinator

Substance of Proposals

The substance of Mr. Schlesinger's proposals was confirmed by several participants and by sources from the administration, key con-gressmen and the industry

The crude-oil tax is one of a number of steps that Mr. Carter has proposed to drive up the price of oil, discourage its consumption and reduce costly imports. The ad-ministration has called the crude-oil tax the centerpiece of its plan.

When the tax was first proposes last year, the industry said it would support the tax only if it could keep part of the proceeds to finance in-creased exploration, under a so-called plowback provisor.

Mr. Carter wanted to rebate all the proceeds to the consuming public, so the tax would not reduce purchasing power and retard ecnomic growth. He also declared that oil company revenues were al-ready ample, and denounced the companies as greedy.

Other Incentives

Even last year, however, Mr. Carter's energy advisers were let-ting it be known they might be willing to give the industry increased revenues in some other way. In par-ticular, they indicated a willingness to rewrite some of the government's complicated oil-pricing regulations so that more oil would fall in higher

It is a variant on these proposal: that Mr. Schlesinger is now reviving as a way of moving the crudeoil tax out of the House-Senate conference committee where it is now stalled. If the Schlesinger plan works, the President would get his tax and the industry would get its money, both at the same time. News of Mr. Schlesinger's move angered liberals on the conference committee. Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., issued a statement several days ago calling the proposals "an insult to a Congress that must vote on most of the 'goodies' he's so generously proposing to hand out."

It may not work, however. Sen. Russell Long. D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and the length of the construction of the construction. Conn., issued a statement several the key figure in the energy conference, said Friday that the crude-oil tax "is in so much trouble that we probably couldn't pass it under any sort of circumstances." According to sources, Mr. Schlesinger's proposals include:

An indication that the administration might move toward the full decontrol of oil prices by 1985 — the same year natural gas prices under companion legislation would be decontrolled — by adopting a so-called "decline curve" that would classify proportionally more oil in the control-free category.

Suggestions that the White House might revamp definitions of so-called "new-new" oil to allow its price to rise to world levels immediate. price to rise to world levels immediately, rather than being phased in gradually as Mr. Carter proposed. • Removal of price controls on oil produced from "tertiary recov-- using detergents to loosen the oil from rock — as well as high-er prices for so-called marginal oil. Mr. Schlesinger reportedly also pointed out that if the energy tax bill is not enacted, producers will lose a provision added by the Sen-ate that would give them back a tax break they lost last year, involving intangible drilling expenses.

Sources in and out of the administration said that the meetings broke up with no commitments by the industry. A large factor in the stalling of the crude-oil tax in the conference committee has been industry opposition.

The Panama Issue

As the tortuous negotiations on the administration-Senate-Panama triangle approach their conclusion, it is worth trying to home in on the issue hiding not so subliminally behind the specific provisions and amendments on which the debate has turned. It is the perception that the treaties represent one in a long and still-unfolding series of U.S. retreats from a previously dominant position of world power. The perception is strongest in the minds of those who reject the treaties outright and those who impose conditions unacceptable to Fanama in approving them. But even some who support the treaties have a sinking feeling that doing the decent thing by Panama may add one more weighty item to a bag already bulging with the U.S. defeat in Vietnam, the loss of strategic supremacy and various real and imagined shortcomings of Carter administration poli-

It is a fair question whether the perception of U.S. weakness reflects a valid historical insight or something of a passing political mood: whether the country is in a period of retrenchment or renewal. Yes, it's true that, to cite a classic instance, the United States, even if it wanted to, could no longer snap its fingers and force Israel to abandon its warwon Sinai ramparts. But even a casual review of the U.S. condition suggests that the sources of U.S. power have not evaporated. It would be startling if, after the traumas of recent years. Americans were not recalculating their position in the world, and the yardsticks by which their position is calculated,

But this is very different from thrusting upon a weak ally an arrangement the United States would not dream of trying to impose on a strong adversary. We do not believe any serious nation would conclude that the United States, by bullying Panama, is proving anything of value about how it means to respond to the very real challenges it faces elsewhere in the world. Other countries would more likely draw just the opposite conclusion. It is a sign of weakness, poor judgment, the misuse of power, not of strength and determination, for a country to throw its weight around in such a way. Americans should not be party either to the jingoism or the self-deceit. The latter may be more dangerous than the former.

To see close-up the flaws in a policy of bullying we invite your attention to Sen. Dennis DeConcini's explanation of the purpose of his reservation authorizing the United States to intervene on its own terms in Panama. What bothers him, the senator has stated, are such internal Panamanian activities as labor unrest and strikes; the actions of an unfriendly government; political riots or upheavals. As an example, he has cited a "sickout" three years ago that disrupted canal operations. Think of it: the United States, unable to enforce the Taft-Hartley Act on its own striking coal miners just a month or so ago, but yet prepared to land troops to put an end to a "sickout" in Panama. Incredible. Mr. DeConcini would treat Panama as though it were an enemy defeated in war. He betrays not the slightest awareness of how-in the 20th century-to treat a

The argument then, is not between those worried about the U.S. global position and those who overlook it: "conservatives" and "liberals," "realists" and "sentimentalists," or what have you. There is plenty of room for them all aboard a version of the treaties acceptable to Panama. The argument is, or ought to be, between those who understand the need to fairly accommodate friends in order to deal better with adversaries, and those who, failing to make this elementary distinc-tion, waste U.S. diplomatic assets and thereby diminish U.S. power, Mr. DeConcini flails at the shadow. Nothing better defines the character of the debate over the Panama Canal treaties or better demonstrates the rights and wrongs of this tortured argument.

Indochina Debt That Lingers

The case for U.S. help to the refugees of Indochina continues to be self-evident. After our involvement in Southeast Asia, no debate over who owes whom how much can be allowed to obscure the worst horrors experienced by many of those in flight. Perhaps half of those who fled in small boats from Vietnam drowned after they were ignored by passing ships or turned back from Asian ports. Thailand has even begun a program of forced repatriation of Lactians, some of whom face death or imprisonment as they

Rescue at sea and temporary haven ashore would not be denied if there were certainty that permanent asylum somewhere awaited the refugees. It has become increasingly evident that the emergency program of sporadic admissions to the United States does not provide that assurance. A long-term approach that provides U.S. asylum for refugees who cannot be resettled elsewhere is essential and the Carter administration seems finally prepared to provide it.

Existing laws permit only 17,400 "nonemergency" admissions a year from all over the world. Carter has approved a new limit of 50,000; a long-pending House bill would fix the limit at only 20,000. A bill introduced by Sen. Kennedy would also permit an extraordinary response when humanitarian or human rights considerations require it, as in the case of continuing outflow of Indochinese, and would liberalize the attorney general's emergency "parole authority," which has been employed to admit hundreds of thousands of Cubans and Hungarians as well as Indochinese in the past two decades. The House bill would replace the parole authority with a more restricted emergency procedure. For all these reasons, the liberal provisions of the Kennedy measure deserve wide support.

Until the legislation is rewritten next year, the parole authority is the only available method of admitting the Vietnamese boat people and some of the 100,000 Indochinese in refugee camps who cannot be placed elsewhere. Their number has been growing by about 3,000 a month. Carter has indicated that he will overrule his Justice Department and Chairman Eilberg of the House Immigration subcommittee and "parole" another 25,000 refugees into the United States in the Four major areas still need attention:

 Boat people. Japan, Singapore and other Asian countries should be urged to stop refusing refugee ships and to regard the United States as a haven of last resort. U.S.-owned vessels should be required, as U.S.-flag ships already are, to pick up refugees in danger at sea. An appeal to non-U.S. shipowners should then receive a favorable response.

 Laotian and Cambodian refugees in Thailand. The red tape and restrictions on admissions to the United States should be waived, as urged by a panel of the International Rescue Committee that recently studied the problem in the camps. Admissions should not be limited to those who were directly involved in the U.S. war effort or have close relatives in the United States.

 Resettlement in the United States. The extraordinary job done by church groups and other voluntary agencies, such as the American Council for Nationalities Service, requires more federal support, particularly for vocational and language training to upgrade job skills. The 172,000 Indochinese so far admitted to the United States have shown themselves to be hard-working and adaptable. They often take jobs Americans reject and less than 6 per cent of employables are unemployed. But 32 per cent still need some public assistance. The AFL-CIO, and a group of black leaders headed by Bayard Rustin have, to their credit, given strong support to the absorption efforts.

· Resettlement in Asia. Despite a major movement of Indochinese refugees to the United States and France and substantial admissions to Canada, Australia and other countries, large-scale resettlement in Thailand and other Asian countries will also be needed. Virtually nothing has as yet been done to promote this. With the Thais reluctant, an international effort will be essential, spurred by U.S. initiatives and financing.

Neutron Bomb Decision

"One can sympathize with Mr. Carter as he wrestles with the problems of being leader of the Western alliance, but grappling successfully with those problems is supposed, after all, to be what is entailed in being President of the United States. It must be added, and should never be forgotten, that NATO's problems of sheer vulnerability to Russia's very large conventional superiority arise in the main because the European members have fallen short of requirements.

"This European shortfall in conventional defense is especially highlighted by the neutron bomb controversy. It is precisely because Europe has allowed Russia to gain such a staggering lead, particularly in tanks, that the neutron bomb, and the question of whether it should be produced and deployed, has an importance far greater than would have been the case if Europe had not for years so blindly leaned back on the American strategic deterrent."

The BOMB Threat

After 14 Years in Cuban Prisons

By Frank Emmick

WASHINGTON—On the morning of Sept. 12, 1963, my house in Havana was completely surrounded by a score of security personnel. I was taken to then headquarters commonly called G-2. There, I was arrested and accused of being the chief of the Central Intelligence Agency in

Of course, I was greatly shocked since I've never been a CIA agent, let alone the chief. I was under contimuous interrogation at all hours of the day and night. I was not per-mitted to get in touch with the Swiss Embassy. So I was surprised, when Rep. Charles O. Porter and several newsmen were authorized to interview me in October, 1963. There, I was told by the Cuban authorities that the death penalty was going to be imposed.

Several weeks after this interview. I was taken out of G-2 with a black hood over my head, forced to lie down on the floor of a car, with three guards resting their feet on my body and their rifles sticking into me. I was driven to some place in Havana and placed into a com-pletely dark refrigerated room, stripped down to my underclothes and forced to sleep uncovered on the floor for eight days. It was so dark that I couldn't see my hands in front of me, and I could move about only by using the walls as my

Transferred

After five months, I was transferred to the old La Cabana fortress, in Havana, and again held incommunicado.

This dungeon consisted of four usable "galleries" where approximately 650 political prisoners were jammed like sardines, forced to sleep on an old, poorly cemented floor, with little ventilation and where the sun, moon or the stars could never be seen.

The sanitary conditions were shocking—only four toilet holes in the floor for the whole population, water rationed by the cup twice a day, and, on occasion, a bath with a bucket and can if you were lucky. At night the conditions were inhuman, with no mattresses, pil-lows, or sheets. We used sacks or whatever material was available and fought for a measly inch of space to rest our bodies.

Executions

It was from this dungeon that 159 of my fellow immates and friends were taken out and executed. I heard the commands and the roar of the firing squads 159 times in a period of approximately nine I was called and taken to trial three times. However, the trials were suspended because my attorney demanded the presence of observers from Geneva. I finally was tried on April 9, 1964, with Geneva observers present as well as ac-credited Western diplomats from non-Communist countries. The trial was a joke, a travesty of justice, with absolutely no positive proof. I was condemned to 30 years. I was

On Sept. 11, 1964, I was taken to the Isle of Pines prison—commonly known as the "island of terror" or Cuba's "Devil's Island." Here the political prisoners were assigned to forced labor, but those classified as 'dangerous persons" were ordered to hard work in the marble quarry.

These work brigades meant even-tual death for most, for if you had escaped being shot at the pole, you were a sure mark here. Dozens of prisoners have been assassinated and hundreds beaten up, bayoneted or severely mistreated at the whim of guard or by official order. Three days after my arrival, I was called out to work in the quarry. However, I refused. Three days

ter, I was returned to La Cabana

Atrocious

Back at the fortress, f was placed in one of the 12 galleries above the ground with condemned political prisoners. The conditions were atrocious. Between 4,500 and 5,000 men, confined in an old fortress that never accommodated more than 500 persons, now jammed to the ceiling with four-tier beds located everywhere possible.

The men were forced to sleep three under each tier, and one in the aisle between ners, on hammocks made of sugar sacks four Paris.

At this prison, as in the others the firing squads operated at full force. There were anywhere from 20 to 25 executions per week, to as many as 27 in one night. I am speaking of 1964. Among us there were no common prisoners, only political prisoners—men from all walks of life, whose only crime was their revulsion of Communism.

One would be surprised how much a human can endure onder such conditions if he has the faith and the courage of his convictions.
The will to fight for a moral cause gives an individual super resistance powers that he never knew he possessed. It is the survival of those determined and willing to sacrifice all to resist the plague of Commu-

Heart Ailing

On June 10, 1973, though suffering from the heart condition angina pectoris, I was transferred to the second floor of a building that obliged me to climb 40 stairs to reach my cell. Climbing stairs for an aging patient is often fatal, but

Eleven days later, I had a severe heart attack. Injections for pain administered by my fellow prisoners saved my life, because I had to wait nine and a half hours before I was finally transferred to a military hospital in Havana. By then, I had double pneumonia as well. It was touch and go for three days. In December, we were transferred to La Cabana again. Conditions did not improve. I didn't receive any mail from my family. None of my letters had been received since

During the 1976 presidential campaign, conditions improved immensely. However, an enormous shortage of medicine persisted and expired medicines were redated or no medication at all was dispensed.

When President Carter was elected, there was jubilation among the prison's administrative officers. They bent over backwards to he good to us and then, suddenly on Dec. 9, 1977, we were transferred to a new model prison in a convoy

Carter's Amiable Reappraisal

By James Reston

fered more fools, made more

Carter has been calling his closest advisers together for what is billed as a "hard reappraisal" of his administration's troubles, but who will tell him the truth? You can almost put it down as a general rule in this town that presidents often invite "honest criticism" from their sides, but seidom get it, and usually don't follow it when they do.

The reasons for this are not obscure. The Oval Office is the most intimidating room in America. It imposes a kind of chivalrous respect on most visitors, and even those legislative lions who roar against the president on Capitol Hill tend to usually lower their voices and follow their prepared speeches when they walk through the White House door.

President Nixon was the most painful example of this conspiracy of silence. Even Henry Kissinger, who is not an excessively modest or silent man, hesitated to face Nixon with the disasters Kissinger knew lay shead. Ehrlichman and Haldeman apparently saved their doubts for their memours, and the few Nixon White House aides who betrayed their fears were regarded as mics or worse. President Kennedy stumbled into the Bay of Pigs in Cuba with-out making a careful analysis with his Cabinet and staff of the conse-quences. President Johnson recognized the value of opposition and even appointed George Ball as his in-house second-guesser, but he rejected Ball's advice on Vietnam, and when Robert McNamara began even to look a little doubtful, Johnson banished him to the World Bank.

President Carter is a different and more complicated case. He is not a majestic personal figure like

Letters— Make it Huxley

I read with horror, in an article signed by me, "Some Logical Prob-lems Concerning the Oyster," (HTT, April 13), a reference to Julian Huxley as the grandson of Thomas Hardy. As this is the sort of error I make when trying to think of two things at the same think of two things at the same time with a mind imperfectly equipped to deal even with one, and as I happened to have been writing about Thomas Hardy at about the same time that I was about the same that I was dealing with the oyster, I dived into my files with apprehension. I found, a little to my surprise as well as my relief, that I had written, correctly, Thomas Huxley, and not Thomas Hardy. I deduce that the electronic machine which now composes your type had been reading "Jude the Obscure" or possibly "The Mayor of Casterbridge" before coming to work, and I would suggest that its memory be cleared before it tackles "The Dynasts." WAVERLEY ROOT.

men and creeds no matter bo preposterous, a respectful hearing. He has listened to more bores, suf-speeches, and held more press conferences than any president since Roosevelt. And he has a kind of swinging-door relationship with Hamilton Jordan and Jody Powell, who are invited to sound off to the President whenever they want his attention. So the problem is not that Carter is isolated, like Nixon, or over-bearing like Johnson, or mentally lazy, insensitive, indifferent or dogmatic. He reads more and sees more people than most of his White se predecessors in this century, and is sympathetic to all their arguments and problems.

Which may be precisely why he is now in trouble. For the main charge against him is not that he doesn't listen to anybody but that he listens to everybody, and cannot make up his mind — or maybe. that he makes it up too often: one day that unemployment is the major problem and then that inflation is the major problem; one day that ians are a threat in the Middle East and in Africa and the next that he must send Secretary of State Vance to Moscow to get Brezhnev to bring the arms race under control; one day that he must see Israel as an ally in the defense of freedom and Western civilization and the next that he must assure the flow of oil from the Arab countries to the free and industrial nations of the Americas, Europe, Ja-pan and the developing nations of Southeast Asia.

Larger 'Truth'

The Cabinet and Carter's White House staff, when they meet with him at Camp David to review all these problems, probably don't tell him the "truth" or what he should do, because they all have a little bit of the problem, and don't really know what the larger "truth" is, or what they would do if they were in his position of decision.

The Cabinet and the White House staff know, maybe better than he does, that, even if he made up his mind, the Congress probably wouldn't go along. They also know that there are no clear or simple answers to any of the domestic or forcign problems be faces.

Carter has another odd problem.

Not since Eisenhower has there been a Cabinet or a White House staff who had more personal affecflon or intellectual respect for their skipper than this Cabinet and staff have for Carter, so they hesitate to criticize him to his face or tell him that part of his problem lies with

Complexity

Despite all the problems and blunders in the United States, there are few if any nations in the world today in which personal life is more decent or secure, or where people can have more hope for their chil-dren. The surprising thing about Carter is that while these things are probably closer to his heart than anything else, he has not been able to articulate the wider humanistic problems, or to reduce all this complexity to identity so that the peo-ple can understand just how difficult it is to choose between the dilemmas of the nation. This is probably the central question that was evaded at Camp David. For only the President, and not the Congress, or the Cabinet, or the White House staff, can clarify the problems for decision, and the difficulty of deciding them. Carter cannot by himself decide what to do about inflation, unemployment, welfare and all the rest of the prob-lems at home, or what to do about arms control, population control or monetary control among other things, abroad. But he can give a clearer lead on how to attack these problems and in what order. For the moment, his popularity sliding, but the stock market is reviving and he will undoubtedly get his Panama treaties and probe bly a strategic arms agreement with the Russians later in the year. Accordingly, it may be a little premature to conclude that he will be a one-term President, considering the alternatives. The same technique is visible in his handling of Cyprus. Mr. Ecevit sent Washington a virtual ultimatum over the arms embargo. When the Carter administration came out publicly against the embargo, Mr. Ecevit then kept the implied bargain by making substantive proposals on Cyprus without waiting for a U.S. initiative. In this new bid to solve the Cyprus problem, the Carter administration apparently is hoping Congress is ready to go aloog with its new approach.

Already bruised by encounters of an unhappy kind with Coogress, the White House thinks it has got the numbers right on the arms hearing before Sen. Ribicoff's embargo. To gain a few votes, the administration abandoned its idea separate Education Department of signing Defense Cooperation Agreements to cover bases in Turkey and Greece for five years. Since these pacts shut out congressional oversight, the reversion to annual packages picked up some support, diminated the leverage of Greece (which by refusing to sign its own DCA blocked action on the twin one with Turkey) and restored U.S. freedom of maneuver. The embargo, if lifted, could be quickly restored if Congress decided Turkey was stalling on the Cyprus negotia-

Puts Pressure on Torrijos

Panama Recession Is Plus for Treaties

By Alan Riding

PANAMA CITY, April 16 (NYT) -A deep recession aggravatyears of uncertainty over the canal issue has become the main pressure on the Panamanian government to accept the new canal treaties despite the reservation attached to them by the U.S. Senate. With most Panamanians seemingly more worried about obtaining their daily bread than preserving their national dignity, the govern-ment of Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos is aware that only the new treaties can revive the economy, which has registered zero growth for the last two years. "The economy is the key to the whole treaty issue domestically," a high official said. "Without a treaty, we're in a real fix. With a treaty, we can begin to grow

Following the attachment by the Senate of a reservation granting the United States the right to intervene militarily to keep open the canal af-ter its operation is taken over by Panama in the year 2000, some analysts have suggested that the country and the government must now choose between "dignity and survival." Aware of the political sensitivity of the reservation, which was proposed by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz, Gen. Torrijos is hopeful that the U.S. Senate will. renounce any intention to intervene in Panama before it votes on ratification of the second of two canal treaties Tuesday.

Analysts believe that Gen. Torrijos is gambling economically because domestic resistance to the treaties, particularly if violent, could frighten away many of the banking and business interests that he hopes will now be wooed back

Future Prospect

The prospect of martial law, in fact if not in name, continuing into the indefinite future poses serious problems for U.S. relations with a nation of such strategic, economie and sentimental importance to Americans. Congressmen who must someday consider a new military bases agreement with Mr. Marcos have been outspokenly critical of martial law.

Anti-Marcos political exiles in the United States have been very active in whipping up oppositon to martial law by playing both on the fact that more than 300,000 Filipi-nos now live in the United States and on historical fondness for what had once seemed a successful transplant of U.S.-style democracy to the former U.S. colony in Asia. After 5½ yesrs of repeated as-surances from Mr. Marcos that he plans to lift martial law, he seems no more emotionally capable of the act than he ever did. He is a hrilliant lawyer who becomes impatient when anyone else tries to legislate. "You can see him fidgeting when he's presiding over meetings where other people are making suggestions, talking on and on," a diplomat said.

The assembly election was so carefully arranged in favor of Mr. Marcos that it was surprising bow relatively free of abuse the actual voting was and bow high the opposition scored - about 40 per cent in Manila - according to Mr. Marcos's vote counters.

Most importantly, unlike Mrs.

The leader of the opposition in Manila, political prisoner and former Sen. Benigno Aquino, was not allowed to campaign, except for one television performance that was so electrifying it was not repeated.

Miss Schalk, 28, is one of the nation's first desert peace officers. The Department of the Interior is using ber and 12 colleagues in 12.5 million acres of publicly owned desert in southeastern California in an effort to control a deepening power struggle over the use and the future of the area.

The desert averages 500 miles long and 200 miles wide. For more than a century, after settlers crossed it on their way West, Califormans all but ignored it as uscless and hostile, fit only for jackrabbits, rattlesnakes and scorpions.

But since the early part of this decade, the pressure of urbanization and a search for energy have begun to lure people there, causing a collision of interests.

Descrt Competitors

The competitors for the desert include urban dwellers who see its spaciousness as a playground for motorcycles and off-road vehicles; environmentalists who want to preserve its stark beauty; cattlemen who want land for grazing; energy industries that want it for nuclear-power plants, transmission lines, oil and coal-slurry pipelines, and min-ing people who want it for iron, boron and other minerals.

In a few places, such as Paim Springs, housing developments are encroaching on the desert.

"We've done a lot of surveys on people's attitude toward the desert," said Neil Pfulb, director of a congressionally mandated study on the future of the desert by the Bureau of Land Management, "and one thing in common shared by all of the groups is that the desert is so large that it provides a sense of

Problems Created by Decolonization of Sahara

Spanish Politicians Debating North Africa Policies

By Stanley Meisler

MADRID, April 16-Spanish politicians are engaged in a confused yet bitter debate over Spain's policies in North Africa, a novelty in a country where foreign policy seemed simple during the Franco regime.

As the newsmagazine Cambio 16 put it in a recent editorial: "For 40 years, Spanish diplomacy had to do un more than hide the shame of Spain and try to make the world lorget the dictatorial character of the regime. Now the diplomats have to handle complexities. In the view of critics, mostly in the leftist opposition, the govern-ment of King Juan Carlos and Premier Adolfo Suarez is failing to handie the complexities well.

The debate centers nn the decolonization of the Spanish Sahara in 1975 and its delivery as the Western Sahara to Morocco and Marritania. That act has brought on renewed rivalry between Morocco and Algeria in North Africa, an Algerian-based guerrilla movement in the Western Sahara, and growing support within the Organization of African Unity for a movement that is demanding independence for Spain's Canary Islands.

Cortes Probe

Despite Premier Suarez's conten-tion that it is pointless to fret over the issue, a committee of the Cortes (parliament) is conducting hearings on the 1975 decision to give Sahara to Morocco and Mauritania. For-mer Premier Carlos Arias Navarro, former Foreign Minister Jose Maria de Areilza and other former officials have been asked to testify.

The problems began in November, 1975, while Franco was dying. King Hassan of Morocco sent 350,000 unarmed peasants on a well-publicized "green march" in occupy that part of the then Spanish Sahara traditionally claimed by Morocco. Under this threat, the Spanish government quickly signed the Declaration of Madrid, which allowed the Sahara to be occupied by Mauritania and Morocco. The agreement was completed Nov. 14, six days before Franco died.

The declaration aroused controversy, first because it seemed to ignore the rights of the 80,000 or so people who live in the Sahara and, second, because it seemed to ally Spain solidly with Morocco in its North African rivalry with Algeria.

Spain had promised the United Nations in 1974 that it would conduct a referendum in the Sahara to find out what kind of future government its people wanted. A month before the declaration was signed a UN mission sounded opinion in the area and concluded that the Saharans wanted independence.

But all this was ignored by the declaration, which technically left the question of sovereignty open. In signing the declaration, Spain agreed that the views of the Saharans could be expressed through the Yerma, the assembly appointed by the Franco regime. With Moroccan troops present, the Yerma later endorsed the division of the Sahara between Morocco and Mauritania, but most observers considered the vote a farce.

The Spanish government contin-ues to insist that it has never recognized the sovereignty of Morocco and Mauritania over the Sahara. But the government negotiated a fishing treaty with Morocco concerning the nffshore waters of the Sahara and, over angry opposition, pushed it through the Cortes in February. During the debate the government argued that Spain recognized Morocco's "jurisdiction" over Saharan waters but not its

Many authorities said the gov-ernment has sided with Morocco because Spain has two enclaves, Ceuta and Melilla, within Morocco. Spain contends that these territo-ries, which have a population of 140,000, are as Spanish as Castile. But Morocco claims them as its own. In exchange for Spanish sup-port on the Saharan issue, however, King Hassan evidently has agreed to let the Ceuta and Melilla matter lie dormant, at least for now. In lining up so openly with Morocco, Spain ignored Algeria's possibilities for revenge. Algeria would not accept an agreement that strengthened its traditional rival by giving it control over the enormous phosphate deposits of the Western Sahara. Moreover, Algeria believed that an independent but Algerian-influenced Sahara might have allowed Algeria full use of an Atlantic Ocean port for the export of Algerian iron.

U.S. Envoy Says UN Conference on Sea Likely to Fail

Mr. Richardson said that there have been a few encouraging signs, such as a renewed determination by many delegates to bridge the gap between the Third World and the industrial nations, but he noted that the conference now has little

"It's about a wash," Mr. Richardson said, reiterating his belief that the conference has about a one-in-three chance of reaching agreement on the key issues, partic ularly on a system of governing the exploitation of vast mineral resources on the ocean floor.

Pessimistic Odds

Mr. Richardson sought to be optimistic. He said that new procedural rules make it less likely that contentious delegates from any of the 147 nations attending the conference can scuttle the session unilaterally. But he offered what seemed to be pessimistic odds.

"When you say there is a one-inthree chance of success, you have to say there is a probability of failure under those circumstances," Mr. Richardson said. "If the odds are worse than 50-50, you have to use Brest.

Parts of France Get Heavy Snow

PARIS, April 16 (AP)—More than two feet of snow fell on high ground in central and southern France late Friday and early yesterday in unseasonal storms that blocked highways and disrupted communications around several towns including the industrial city of Clermont-Ferrand.

The French weather service said France was experiencing its worst April cold spell for 30 years. Off the Atlantic and Mediterranean coasts, gale-force northerly winds with gusts of more than 100 m.p.h. hindered maritime traffic and fishermen. Off the Brittany coast, the Danish coastal freighter Henriette Bravo sank in heavy seas with its cargo of 900 tons of crude oil mixed with seaweed which had been scooped up from the March 17 oil spill of the tanker Amoco Cadiz. The crew was rescued by a French Navy tug and taken to

Generally, the Third World has favored the creation of an operating body, called the Enterprise, that would harvest the minerals for all nations. The United States and other industrialized nations favor a dual system under which the En-terprise and private mining firms would operate simultaneously. But the conference has not even reached those issues. For two weeks, delegates fought bitterly over the election of a president, Shirley Amerasinghe of Sri Lanka. Then they began fighting over procedures and the wording of the cedures and the wording of the agenda, promoting Mr. Amera-singhe to complain, "We will look ridiculous if we go on like this." Mr. Richardson said that the conference conceivably could adown at the end of the seven weeks and resume next year, providing it was close to agreement.

Last Chance

However, many observers believe that the present session is a last chance to set seabed-mining guidelines. Several mining firms already have begun experimental scabed mining, and a few are ready to be-gin full-scale operations, having invested up to $50 million each in research and development.

One of the most difficult issues that the conference faces is the right of access of landlocked and "geographically disadvantaged" nations to predetermined economic zones in the oceans,

Meanwhile, the U.S. House of Representatives is considering a bill that would anthorize and encourage U.S. mining companies to begin unilaterally seabed-mining operations. Conference sources said that some delegates have during the Geneva session, it would destroy the chances for a treaty. But it is unlikely that the Sensi would act before then

Two Suspects In Letelier Case Held in Miami

WASHINGTON, April 16 (WP)—Two anti-Castro Cuban es-iles thought by U.S. investigators to be involved in the alleged conspiracy to murder former Chilean Am. passador Orlando Letelier have been arrested in Miami and held on charges unrelated to the 19% bombing of Mr. Letelier's car.

One of the two men, Guillenn Novo, had been a fugitive for nearly a year, since U.S. investigaton probing the Washington assauing tion of Mr. Letelier began to investigate Novo's foreign travel and found that he had gone to Chile and Venezuela witout informing his probation officer.

The other, Alvin Ross, last spring was subpoensed before the grand jury that was probing Mr. Letelier's death and was granted immunity from prosecution in return for his cooperation with law enforcement anthonnes. But he refused to talk and was never presented to the panel as a witness.

According to an announcement by the Miami bureau of the FBL the two men were arrested sens rately on Friday and there was no indication that either had been aware of the other's presence in the

Yet, Eurobond investors, particularly institutions, are showing B notes, bankers say. Hence, some bankers are expecting the Beatrice offering to sell well despite its low coupon. The notes, to be sold at par, are fully underwritten by the management group and will be re-offered at a selling concession of 1.25 percent.

Even if credit conditions become tight, medium-term notes will have a high degree of marketability and it's liquidity rather than yield that investors are after these days," one banker commented.

To some observers, B rush of banks to the international bond market this week represented B good indication that banks were expecting credit conditions to tighten and were accordingly raising money while it is cheap.

U.S. Commodities

CHICAGO, April 16 (AP)—A flurry of rumored and confirmed Chinese purchases of U.S. grain offset most of the pressure exerted on those futures last week by the defeat of emergency U.S. farm legislation.

And although wheat and corn prices showed slight losses for the period, soybean futures at the Chicago Board of Trade surged about 38 cents in contracts for delivery before this year's harvest.

Anticipation that China could emerge as a major market for U.S. agricultural products, combined with an overall improvement in export demand, also tempered bearish implications of a government survey of farmers' planting intentions.

In the survey, farmers said they would increase their soybean plantings by 8 per cent this year, while cutting corn acreage by only 3 per cent. The figures were considered less reliable than usual, however, because they failed to reflect the potential impact of revisions in federal farm policy. Throughout last week, soybean oil contracts were supported by specula-replay of President Ford's 1974 pep tion that China might buy sizable quantities of that product. Export firms talk on the same subject — but were large buyers in soybean oil futures, contributing to gains of 2 cents a pound in futures prices.

Friday, rumors that China was also in the market for U.S. soybeans increased those contracts 30 ceats, the daily limit, before profit taking the to strong gains in explosive whittled the advance by a few pennies at the close. Heavy demand in the wheat pit at the beginning and end of the period was pegged to speculation about Chinese buying and reports of frost ge to winter wheat crops in the Soviet Union.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture confirmed last Monday that China had purchased 22 million bushels of wheat. It was the first American grain sold to that country since 1974.

In all, wheat futures netted losses of 1 to 4 cents a bushel to finish at $3.2214 in the May delivery. Corn contracts slipped by an average of 3 cents to $2.6314 in the nearest month.

Meanwhile, gold and silver futures traded on New York's Comex edged a shade lower last week. Even though most traders tacked B "jawboning" label on President Carter's anti-inflation stance, an analyst noted "a slight decrease in the number of people interested in buying precious metals as an inflation hedge."

Gold futures were off about a dollar for the week, finishing at $176.80 an ounce in the April contract. Silver deliveries slipped about 21/2 cents, no rollback of the latest levels closing at $5.1914 an ounce.

Few Gains Are Foreseen in War on Inflation

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, April 16 (NYT)-Nothing particularly starting em-arged from last week's eagerly awaited presidential message on the administration's plans for fighting inflation. Consequently, no dra-matic reaction appeared in the fi-nancial markets. President Carter's talk induced some polite comments and some yawns. There were some rueful remarks that it was merely a without the WIN ("Whip Inflation Now") buttons.

What did arouse the stock mar-of encouraging economic news. There were solid auto and retail sales gains in the latest periods, a big comeback in American indus-trial production during March big comeoack in American indus-trial production during March, hopeful steadiness in the dollar and money-supply growth recently, and the tough stand against inflation re-peatedly enunciated by the new chairman of the Federal Reserve

Nevertheless, the general conclu-sion last week was that the nation will have to face, for a while at least, the prospect of further ad-vances for inflation — or, at best, and continued difficulties with high-cost oil imports, the foreign-trade deficit and the erosion of the dollar without any new artillery from Washington to battle the

The absence of any firm, new initiatives was hardly surprising, in view of the administration's general approach toward inflation strategy. has renounced mandatory wage and price controls as ill-advised and counterproductive. And the President's economic advisers have evinced a strong distaste for severe-ly restrictive fiscal and monetary policies to check inflation for fear such measures might end the current expansion of the economy and increase unemployment.

Unequivocal Words

In answer to a question after his inflation talk last Tuesday, President Carter was unequivocal in dismissing the possibility of mandatory controls at this time. "The only instance in which I think wage price controls might be applied," he said, "would be a case of national emergency, like an all-out war or some tragedy of that kind, where normal economic processes would not be at work." It was that pronouncement that most pleased businessmen and others in the private sector, though some re-main skeptical that the administra-

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, April 16 (NYT)—The stock market erupted in a rousing rally Friday in the heaviest trading in the history of the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones industrial average soared 19.92 points to finish the week with a gain of 25.55 points to 795.13. The surge was the largest daily advance for the Dow in over a year and a half.

The rally fed on favorable economic developments and reports that President Carter was planning to reduce or postpone his proposal to cut taxes. Cash-laden institutions left the sidelines, eager to buy the long-dormant blue chips and glamour stocks, which were the best performers.

Volume on Friday climbed to 52.28 million shares, easily surpassing the previous daily record of 44.51 million set on Feb. 20, 1976. Turnover for the week climbed to 160.11 million shares from 120.16 million shares in

The market started to improve on Thursday on the news of a sharp upswing in new-car sales and from generally improved first-quarter corporate earnings. Sales of domestic cars climbed 26.8 per cent in the first selling days of April, compared with the corresponding period last year. A combination of factors accounted for Friday's market explosion. In the first hour of trading the key index was up 12.82 points on a turnover of 14.97 million shares, the largest first-hour volume in history.

Helping to spur buying Friday was the news that the nation's money supply rose only $400 million in the first week of April, or far less than expected. An overly rapid growth in money supply is viewed as a major stimulant to inflations.

Other plus factors were a White House report that President Carter might reduce or delay his $25-billion tax cut, and the government anuncement before the market opened Friday that the nation's March industrial production rose 1.4 per cent, against a revised rise of threetenths of 1 per cent in February.

Earlier in the week, investors showed disappointment with President Carter's anti-inflation message. The Dow fell 3.47 points after the President dent's talk on Tuesday.

tion will hold to that resolve if inflation worsens somewhere down the line

President Carter's anti-inflation message may have been impressive in its sincerity, some commentators said, but it lell short in practical realities. Voluntarism simply won't work in the present atmosphere, and you cannot control the nation's big economic problems through appeals in the absence of a compelling national emergency or some imaginative actions, it was widely said.

The inflation problem is quite serious, but the perception of its gravity has not been shared at all levels of society — certainly not in the halls of Congress, which had blithely been enacting a number of measures that have exacerbated the situation. Perhaps the legislators are finally getting the message, however. Two days after the President threatened to veto any legisla-tion that seemed to increase infladown the costly farm-relief bill that was passed by the Senate. What President Carter proposed was reminiscent of the array of bland measures that his predecessor offered three and a half years ago, with one notable exception: President Ford had ill-advisedly suggested a 5-per-cent tax surcharge on both personal and corporate incomes to counteract the inf-lationary thrust — at the very time that the real danger was recession, not further inflation. He subsequently executed the famous 179legree turn away from his highertax course, and he vetoed a number of spending bills in the interest of stifling inflation.

Can you name the 10TH largest correspondent bank in the U.S.?

To give you some hint of who we are, banking professionals in over 1,100 banks—both in the U.S. and throughout the world—have chosen us as a correspondent. We have 300 offices in New York State and key people in 22 of the world's major financial

We're the 12th largest bank in the U.S. with $10.2 billion in deposits and total assets of $12.1 billion. For years, we've been involved in foreign exchange and foreign currency management. So, not only do we have the capabilities, we also have the knowledge to provide you with direct loans and to manage major international credits.

Maybe it's because of what we have to offer worldwide that more than half the companies on the "Fortune 500" list do business with us.

Now you know everything about us except our name. We're the Marine Midland Bank.

Correspondent ranking based on total deposits due other banks as of Perember 31, 1976.

A bank with 10,000 branches in France knows a lot about arowth.

Crédit Agricale was founded in 1894 to meet the growing needs of the French farm community through a decentralized, co-aperative banking structure. Today, with aver 10,000 branches, Crédit Agricole plays a leading rale in the development and financing of every sector of French ogribusiness.

The International Department of the Caisse Nationale de Crédit Agricale ICNCAI, operating an the international financial market, pravides its custamers with a full range of services regarding foreign transactions and international business. Crédit Agricale's dense network facilitates all banking operations in France for its foreign correspondents. The CNCA is officially associated with the principal European co-operative banks under the name "UNICO Banking Group" and is cannected with the Swift network. The CNCA finances the international commerce of agricultural products and all related agribusiness aperations, such as agri-industrial complexes.

"Another Successful Year"

A Summary of the Statement by Mr. Robert Henderson, Chairman of the parent company KLEINWORT, BENSON, LONSDALE LIMITED, in the 1977 Report and Accounts.

Profit after tax was £7,479,000, compared with £6,542,000 in 1976. The total dividend of 4.1202p per share compares with 3.72241p last year. The overall results of the operating divisions and subsidiary companies have shown a healthy improvement.

INTERNATIONAL BANKING

Sterling lending has expanded satisfactorily, and elsewhere we have concentrated lending in our traditional areas of business by assisting customers with short-term finance, particularly for international trade. Medium-term lending has principally been in support of the syndication of major loans for the export of capital goods guaranteed by ECGD and for capital projects overseas. New domestic sterling acceptance business has been added. CORPORATE FINANCE

The Division was consistently busy in the traditional areas of providing financial advice to corporate clients, money raising and acquisitions and mergers. The year was notable for the number of dollar issues, principally of European Depository Receipts, managed for Japanese companies, and the Eurobond Dealing Department also had a profitable year.

The funds under management have increased and fee income has improved markedly. The United Kingdom and overseas funds which we manage have continued to perform

PROJECT FINANCE

The team has had an active year, and previous groundwork is producing results.

The year was again a satisfactory one for the bullion broking and precious metal fabricating activities of the Sharps Pixley Group, and profitability was in line with the

OVERSEAS SUBSIDIARIES

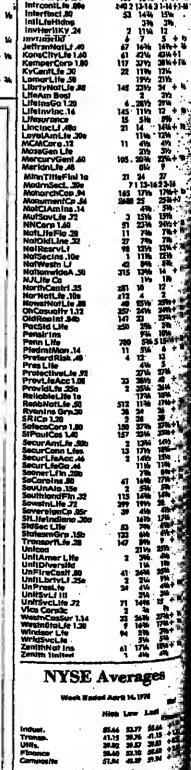

Among our overseas subsidiaries, those in Jersey and Guernsey continue to flourish and Kleinwort, Benson (Geneva) S.A. produced good profits in a highly competitive banking environment. The results of Kleinwort Benson McCowan Incorporated have exceeded expectations.

THE FUTURE

Although our Banking Division has made a good start to the year, by its very nature merchant banking does not lend itself to predictions about prospects. Success when it comes is often the result of new opportunities taken or created. With a broadly based business, an excellent management team, and a strong underlying capital base, I am confident that we are well equipped to continue this tradition.

He promised some tougher White House jawboning with business and labor, proposed a slightly lower limit on rederal, pay increases suggested. federal pay increases, suggested selling more humber from government lands, threatened a presiden-tial veto of bills that exceed budget limitations and again pledged ef-forts to have costly federal regulations on business reduced.

The crucial missing element, in the eyes of the business and financial community, was a program to reduce federal spending and the budget deficit, not merely trying to prevent it from rising. At this point in a business expansion (the threeyear point) the deficit should be declining, but it is not.

Not only have the government's deficits been growing in recent years, they have been increasing in relation to this country's gross na-tional product. In the 1950s the deficits in seven years averaged about five-tenths of 1 per cent of the GNP, but they grew to eight-tenths of 1 per cent in the 1960s and to 2.3 per cent in the present

Since the small surplus of $269 million in the 1960 fiscal year, the budget has been written in red ink every year except one, fiscal 1969, when there was a surplus of $3.2 billion. The cumulative deficit for the last two decades is now around $300 billion.

York Stock Exchange holds his ears against the din of trading on Friday, when a record 52,280,000 shares were traded. The Dow-Jones Industrial average rose by 19.92 noints — the biggest gain in a year and a half — and brokers were toasting each other with champagne.

Merrill Lynch Purchases White, Weld for Cash

NEW YORK, April 16 (NYT)— Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, the largest U.S. securities firm, announced late Friday that it bought White, Weld & Co., a middle-sized old-line international investment banking house that had been fighting to survive, for $50 million in cash.

As part of the transaction, Merrill Lynch acquired a minority interest in Ste. Anonyme Finaciere du Credit Suisse et de White, Weld and then granted an option to Credit Suisse to purchase this interest. [Included in this holding are London-based Credit Suisse White Weld, one of the leading paritic-pants in the Eurobond market, Clariden Bank and Valeurs White Weld of Switzerland and Banque Française de Depots et de Titres.] The acquisition is one of the largest of a score or more Wall Street mergers that have taken place since the securities industry was forced almost exactly three years ago to set commission rates competitively.

In Washington, a Justice Department spokesman indicated that the anti-trust division would likely investigate the merger. So far, mergers of Wall Street firms have not brought anti-trust action.

In the announcement, which caught White, Weld employees by surprise, Merrill Lynch & Co., the parent holding company, said it acquired White, Weld Holdings Inc. and then merged that company's subsidiary White, Weld & Co. into Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith. The White, Weld name will not disappear entirely but will be added to the investment banking arm of Merrill Lynch, which has been renamed Merrill Lynch-White Weld Capital Markets Group.

Merrill Lynch chairman Donald Regan said all the employees and officers of White, Weld have joined the Merrill Lynch organization, primarily in the company's brokerage and investment banking fields. White, Weld founded in 1895, operated 26 offices in the United tates and seven overseas and had roughly 500 securities salesmen. All told, it employed 2,000 people, most of whom are expected to continue with Merrill Lynch," the announcement stated. Merrill Lynch, has 370 offices around the world, including 269 brokerage offices in the United States and 60 in Canada and overseas.

REFLECTIONS WITHOUT MIRRORS

Louis Nizer. Doubleday. 468 pp. $10.95.

Reviewed by Ben Irwin

L OUIS Nizer states at the open-ing of this, his fourth book, that the reason he is not writing an autobiography is that he considers "such an enterprise an arrogant ex-pression of ego." Do not be misled. On every other page of this entertaining, chatty, sprawling volume of memoirs and impressions, Nizer reveals a very healthy and formidable ego.

The man is entitled. The immi-grant son of poor Jewish parents who arrived in the United States from England when he was a child, Nizer rose to become one of Ameri-ca's most distinguished and widely publicized trial lawyers. He represented such notables as Elizabeth Toylor. Marlene Dietrich, John O'Hara and Igor Cassini, among others, and was a friend and confidante of industrial and political figures. They are all in this book. Evidence of the Nizer ego is perhaps best demonstrated by the fact that prior to Richard Nixon's resigning he prepared an imaginary summation that he might deliver before the Supreme Court if the president decided to submit himself to an impeachment trial. More than that, at the request of a friend of the Nixon family, he sent a copy to the White House assuring the friend that "if the right argument [Nizer's] were made, Nixon might not be removed from office."

Nizer prints his plea for Nixon in full and it is an astonishing piece of work with one truly remarkable argument. He compares FDR's gift of 50 destroyers to England (technically violating America's then ocutrality), o gift defended on the ground that it aided Britain in its war against Hitler, to Nixon's defense that the bombing of Cambodia was essential to saving the lives of American soldiers.

If the ex-president ever counts his blessings on those long nights at San Clemente, he should include the fact he oever had to sit in a courtroom listening to Louis Nizer expand that defense.

Not all of the book is devoted to Nizer's legal career. He is an ex-traordinarily versatile man, an arr-ist whose work has been exhibited,

UN Job Priority For Women to Be Proposed

GENEVA, April 16 (AP)-A proposal to give women priority over men for management positions when both are equally qualified a to come before the United Nations General Assembly this fall.

It is one of a score of ideas put forward in the last 10 years by a group of 11 diplomats attempting to change the image of the UN as a complex, unmanageable bureaucracy that often wastes time and mon-

There are plenty of players who mismanage winning positions, ci-ther taking them too flippantly or drifting carelessly into whatever schemes for counterplay their opponents may devise. Often enough, they lose the thread of the game and go on to lose.

and go on to lose.

Yet winning positions ought to be enjoyed, to be played to the full,
to be used as vehicles for sharp, brilliant finishes whenever possible. Think of them as beautiful revenge for the times you have been on the receiving end.

Follow the example of Gyula Sax, a 26-year-old Hungarian grandmaster, who presistently igoored the gain of material to demolish Leonid Shamkovitch, a New York York grandmaster, by scintilating tactics in the second round of the Hastings International Tourna-

Golf Tournament Shifted

DUBLIN, April 16 (Reuters)— The 1978 World Golf Tournament has been moved from Waterville, Ireland, the course's owners said

The John A. Mulcahy Organiza-tion said the International Golf Association had decided to move the event because of opposition in Ire-land. The tournament scheduled to start July 6, is now expected to go to Spain or Portugal.

Both the Irish government and anti-apartheid groups had protested against the inclusion of a South African team in the competition. A statement from the Mulcahy organization said, "In order to promote a tournament of this magni-tude it was always considered es-sential that there would be full and unstinted support from all sectors of the country staging this great in-ternational event. This has not proved to be the case in Ireland."

The fear that Ireland's long-running telecommunications dispute might disrupt the tournament was also a factor in the decision, the Howe led off the inning with a double and took third on Roger Mezzger's bloop single to center. Lemongello sacrificed Metzger to second before Terry Publ was intentionally walked to load the bases. Cabell spoiled the strategy by lining a single to center, scoring Howe and Metzger. Cesar Cedeno followed with an RBI single to left, scoring Publ with the final run.

Phillies 3, Cardinals 2

Greg Luzinski's one-out double in the top of the 10th inning scored Larry Bowa from first base and gave Philadelphia a 3-2 triumph over St. Louis. Philadelphia leithander Tug McGraw, 1-0, was the winner in relief of right-hander Larry Christenson, who limited St. Louis to two runs on seven hits through the first eight innings.

Expos 4, Mets 3

Andre Dawson hit a home run with two ont in the 11th inning to give Montreal a 4-3 triumph over New York, Bill Atkinson, 1-0, was credited with the victory after pitching three innings of relief. Bob Myrick, 0-1, took the loss. The Mets scored two runs in the first inning and their third in the seventh. Montreal got two runs back in the bottom of the seventh against Mets starter Craig Swan. Dave Cash reached base on an er-ror by Tim Foli and moved to third on Gary Carter's double to left. After Tony Perez struck out, Larry Parrish hit a bloop double to right to make it 3-2. The Expos tied the game in the ninth when Cash led off with a triple to right and scored a groundout by Carter.

Pirates 13, Cubs 10

Bill Robinson's grand slam, his second home run of the game, capped a nine-run fourth inning that carried Pittsburgh to a 13-10 victory over Chicago as the Pirates snapped a five-game losing streak. The Cubs had a 3-2 lead going into Iourth when Dave Parker singled, Willie Stargell walked and Rennie Stennett beat out an infield single to load the bases. Ed Ott singled for two runs and Phil Garner and Frank Taveras each singled in a run. After Omar Moreno singled to refill the bases, Parker walked to force in a run. The Tigers added two runs in the ninth on consecutive RBI doubles by Rusty Staub and Jason Thompson.

Orioles 7, Brewers 0

Jim Palmer, making his first start following a shoulder ailment, held Milwaukee hitless for five innings and finished with a two-hitter, pitching Baltimore to a 7-0 victory. Andy Etchebarren ended the no-hit bid with a sharp grounder through the box in the sixth. Larry Hisle had the other hit off Palmer, beating out a grounder to Doug De-Cinces behind the bag at third in the seventh. Sixto Lezcano walked on a 3-2 pitch with two out in the fifth. Loser Jerry Augustine, 2-1, committed two run-scoring balks, one during Baltimore's five-run fifth inning when the Brewers twice misplayed base-hit bunts. Eddie Murray and Rich Daner each con-tributed two-run singles.

Yankees 3, White Sox

Mickey Rivers hit a two-run inside-the-park homer to carry New York to a 3-2 victory over Chicago. Rivers connected in the eighth inning after Mickey Klutts, filling in for third baseman Graig Nettles, opened with a double against loser Francisco Barrios. Willie Randolph sacrificed Klutts to third and Rivers drove the ball to the fence in left-center field. He circled the bases, beating the relay to the plate with a head-first slide. BALTIMORE, April 16 (UPI)— Earl Weaver, manager of the Baltimore Orioles, watched in Milwaukee last week as club lost three straight games to the Brewers, managed by Weaver's ex-pitching coach, George Bamberger. Weaver, however, regained his prestige on Friday when the Orioles overcame a four-run deficit to de-feat the Brewers, 6-5, and win their first game of the season after five losses. It was Milwaukee's first loss this year after five victories. The Orioles expitalized on two Milwaukee errors to set up a fiverun third inning.

NEW YORK—Riding the big not enjoy tax deductibility must be jets. I studied the culture of made to suffer. airplanes. It is patriarchal. At the head of the airplane, occupying the best seats, sit the pilot and his crew. They are always men. Airplane pilotage is apparently one occupation in which feminists make no claim for equality.

Perhaps it is Perhaps it is because women are unable to get the proper nuance of insincere lechery into such utterances as, "And to serve you this morning." you this morning, we have three beautiful hostess-Baker male cultures, one is expected to make a genteel pretense at lechery while airborne, but never more than might be appropri-ate 10 a gentleman at his club. The hostesses' form-fitting suits, careful cosmetic work and engaging smiles must not be misinterpreted however, for the ladies can become disagreeable very rapidly if, say, pinched on the thigh, as one was on a recent flight I took to Florida.

One is instructed by amplifier to stay buckled into the seat for one's own safety or because entering the corridors will interfere with the stewardesses' work. Despite the geniality of the tone and the suggestion that the management is genuinely concerned for your well-being, one suspects that the crew also regards the passengers as nuisances to be kept immobilized as much as possible.

Behind the pilot sit the first-class passengers in comfortable seats. Most commonly, they seem to be businessmen traveling on expense

These men are concerned with establishing their positions in the hierarchical order, which they do by asking each other, "Who are you with?" To be with one of Fortune's 500 biggest corporations is superior to being with yourself. Being with the federal government is better than being with the government of Biloxi, Miss. And so on.

Behind the first-class section sit the people who, for the most part, have paid for their own tickets. Their seats are cramped and jammed uncomfortably close together. This is consistent with the national policy that people who do anything else.

At the rear of the airplane, in a ghetto marked by signs, sit the miserable smokers, confined to the back of the cabin by federal fiat and clean-air zealots. These people feel ashamed because their vice is exposed for all to see by the mere fact of their seat assignments.

Their sense of shame, coupled with a natural terror anyone might experience upon being sealed into an oversized metal container and shot through the sky at 550 miles an hour, tends to make them puff at an even faster rate than they do in the privacy of their homes.

Quiet commonly, after the stewardesses have sedated everyone with alcohol, passengers are offered trays bearing material which looks as if it should be autopsied. This is the famous airline food, of which so much as been written. Unlike smoking the eating of this food is permitted anyplace in the cabin, disgusting though it is to witness people indulge themselves in this squalid vice.

Why persons who desire to con-sume the contents of these trays are not compelled to ride confined like smokers in degrading sections of the airplane where normal people will not be exposed to their vice is difficult to say. It is one of the logical inconsistencies that make airline culture so curious. Not long ago, on a trip to California, I had to sit next to a man who ate the whole thing—the gray matter, the broccoli-colored cardboard splattered with dark yellow muci-iage, something that looked like a

I would have gone back among the smokers for relief, but the pilot had commanded me to stay strapped in place, and in a patriar-chal society one does not challenge authority as casually as in wide open spaces which are not moving at 550 miles an hour.

For relief, I begged the stewardess for a strong drug called brandy, but she refused. I had already taken the limit, which was two. The airplane is like a father. It does not want sedation to become addiction. It would have been dangerous to make a scene. Armed federal policemen ride the airplanes in civilian clothes to deal with makers of

The stewardess asked the eater how he liked his dinner. "Fine," he said. He probably didn't dare say 'The only reason I let the zoo give out my name was because it would generate more publicity, which would sell more apples, so I can buy more animals.'

U.S. Philanthropy Starts With Dimes

TEW YORK (AP)—Most of the time Ralph Bernstein, a 47year-old Philadelphian, sells greeting cards. But on Sundays in spring, summer and fall, he sets up shop outside the Philadelphia Zoo and sells candied apples. He sometimes takes in $200.

When he's earned enough, he asks for a list of animals the zoo wants, and be buys one. So far he has bought five, for a total cost of $3,500.

Why does be do this?

"When you give your money to charity, you never see it. It ends up in Biafra. I can see the animals. I can watch them grow. When rains on Sunday. I'm disappointed because I can't go to the

Ralph Bernstein is one of a small army of Americans who, in small towns or big cities, quietly or with fanfare, in dimes, dollars or more, step out of their frugal or affluent lives to endow favorite projects and personal dreams.

The tradition of giving may be better known among the Carne-gies, Mellons, Rockefellers, Sloans and Fords, but it is alive and well among the Bernsteins of Philadelphia, the Spencers of Kansas City, the Maxwells of Farmington, N.M., the Porters of Haywood, Calif., and the Cannons of Richmond, Va.

"Sure, people think I'm nuts, but that doesn't bother me," says Bernstein. "I plan to keep buying these animals as long as I can The only reason I let the zoo give out my name was because it would generate more publicity, which would sell more apples, so I can buy more animals."

The range of giving is extraordinary. Indian Artifacts

The Gilbert Maxwells of Farmington have donated a treasure of Indian artifacts to the Maxwell Museum of Anthropology at the University of New Mexico.

His fountains are all over the state of Utah, but the major one is on the plaza of the administration building of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in Salt Lake City. He builds fountains, his friends say, because they provide sanctuary, a "respite from the hurry-hurry world."

Thomas Cannon, a black postal worker, and his wife live in virtual poverty in a Richmond, Va., slum, not because they have to, but because they choose to. He makes $15,000 a year.

But, since 1972, be bas given away some $26,000, mostly in $1,000 parcels. He gives to poor people. He endowed a $1,000 annual scholarship at Hampton Institute, his alma mater. He gave to a Nigerian youngster brought to Richmond for a rare operation. He supports a program for prisoner rehabilitation.

To many Americans, wealth is the bruse on the hill, but to many wealthy Americans, wealth, whether family money or personal fortune, means a responsibility to share. Tax deductions may make it easier, but there is a sense that wealth must be recycled. Traces of this large-scale giving are all over the United

A Good Feeling

He just loves the zoo. "One day recently I was the only one there, walking around like a nut. Some people never know whom they are helping. They just reach into a special place in their hearts and give of themselves.

Gladys Porter of Hayward, Calif., is a widow now and 86 years old. But when she was 6, she remembers riding with her stepfather in a buggy from Nevada City, Calif., to a small grave he had seen, a small circle of stones between two codar trees, alongside when the ferriment Tanil coming out of the Donne New She used to be the Emigrant Trail coming out of the Donner Pass. She carried a bouquet of flowers.

On one cedar tree was a white round-topped board with the initials J.A.A. and the date 1858. On the other tree, another board with the inscription, "In memory of Julius Albert Apperson, May 6. 1858. Age 2 years, 2 months, 25 days."

The flowers are for a little boy there," her stepfather said. From that moment, she felt the grave was hers to tend.

Although she spent much of her life out of the state, she re-turned at age 48 with her busband, Harry Porter, and they began driving regularly to the grave by the side of state highway 20 in

They put up a small engraved headstone, kept the markers painted and built a small white picket fence around the grave.

Local history had it that the boy had died in a trek through the Donner Pass, but back issues of the Nevada Democrat show that he died of burns inflicted when he and other children were playing near a fire.

The Native Sons of the Golden West put up a plaque at the site, honoring the Porters, and saying: "The marking of this lone grave perpetuates the memory of all lone graves throughout the state of California." Mrs. Porter still tries to get friends to drive her to the grave, and her fervent wish is that someone will look after it when she is
